This presentation was developed by Lin Wu, Assistant Professor and Reference Librarian at the University of Tennessee Health Science Center Library. The presentation will demonstrate online catalog searches for books and journals and will help you understand search results. The podcast version of this presentation is at http://library.utmem.edu/media/podcasting/Podcast/Podcast.html
The library’s online catalog contains all the library materials both print and electronic. To access the library’s online catalog, first please go to the library’s home page at library.utmem.edu. You can access the library’s online catalog either from the left Navigation or under Resources or from the Most Popular Resources drop-down menu.
There are several ways to conduct the online catalog search. For example, you can search it by author, by title, by journal title, or by call number if you know the information. If you don’t, start your search by using keyword. In this case, you want to find books about nursing research. So enter the search term Nursing Research in the search box. Then click on the search button.
This is part of the search results of the book search for Nursing Research. There are total 206 search results related to nursing research. The titles are hyper links that link to the bibliographic information of the book. Location tells you where the item is located. In this case, the first item is in Permanent Reserves which means you can only check it out for in-library-use for 2 hours. Most of the book collection is located on the second floor of the library. With the call # you will find this book on the bookshelves. When the status of the item shows available, it means the book is available for you to check out. If it shows the due date like the second item, it means the book was checked out.
Searching for a journal. If you know the journal you are looking for, simply enter the title to conduct a journal title search. In this case, the library has online and print subscriptions to the American Journal of Nursing. The online access to full text articles starts from Jan. 1996 while the print collection starts from Vo. 1 1900. You can enter the year into the search box at the bottom of the page to search for a specific year to see the library’s holding information.
